"Evening World" Readers Giving Nobly for the Poor Children's Christmas.

The fair in aid of THE EVENING WORLD'S Christmas-Tree Fund is in full swing to-day at the Metropolitan Opera-House concert room. Every one interested in the effort to maks happy the great holiday for the city's thousands of destitute children should attend this fair. Among the chief attractions is a $1,000 cabinet piano, presented by Hardman & Peck. It will be contested for at $1 a ticket. There are many other valua-ble articles to be disposed of, and the young ladies in charge of the fair, under Miss Lon Bronson's direction, are confident of a successful issue. The concert programme is very interesting.
At Worth's Museum to-day benefit performances in aid of the Fund are being given. All the receipts are to be donated. There are many unusual attractions, and a specially prepared programme is presented.

Manager John B. Doris devotes the receipts of his two Museums, the Eighth avenue and Harlem establishments, between 10 a. m. and 6 r. m. to-morrow, to the Fund. The list of attractions for sight-seers is exensive and novel, and to swell the receipts Manager Doris offers to the person purchasing the largest number of tickets at either

Friday there will be two benefits at two theatres for this object. One will be at the Union Square nuder the patronage of a number of well-known society women, and the other at Jacobs Third Avenue Theatro. Messra. Edwards and Jerome H. Eddy and Mme. Fernandez, who are arranging this matinee for the little folks, report that a large number of the many professional people who are resting in town this week have signified their willingness to devote one afternoon of their holiday to making a Merry Christmas for the children of the meglected poor.

"Annt Louisa" Eldridge, who never can refuse when asked to do a charitable deed, has consented to preside over a flower sale in the lobby, but she says:

"Do ask the florists if they won't be good enough to send in flowers for the benefit of these poor young ones without being personally invited to do so. I have my hands already so full that I really have not time to call and beg."

Here is a list of the places where the Christmas parties will be held:

Turn Hall, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Third avenue.

Maennerchor Hall, Fifty-sixth street and Third avenue.

Nilsson Hall, East Fifteenth street.
Apollo Hall, Clinton street.
Salvation Army Hall, Soventh avenue near Thirty-fifth street.

Palace link, Clermont avenue, Brooklyn.
Cooper's Hall, Newark avenue and Washington Place, Jersey City.

Too warm thanks cannot be expressed to the ladies who will have charge of the trees and the distribution of the gifts. Mrs. John Allen and a bevy of pretty girls will have charge at the Harlem party; Mrs. Harriet Hubbard Ayer at Nilsson Hall; Mrs. Benson and Mrs. George R. Hough, at Jersey City. The others will be sunounced. Each is to be assisted by numerous volunteers, enthusiastic in the cause.

Donations of goods and toys are Hoerally bestowed by merchants and others. Two big boxes from Mr. Straus of R. H. Macy & Co. were received yesterlay, and a great many others, which will all be duly acknowledged as soon as space permits.

ONE DAY'S CALLERS.

An Invitation to a Christmas Workers' Reception Next Saturday. Dear Little Friends

You remember how furiously it stormed Saturday? Well, I had an "at home, and a perfect round of calfers, each bearing an offering for the poor children's Christmas

First came Robbie Heggie, all the way from One Hundred and Twenty-third street, with a box full of money labelled "Robbie's pennies for the Poor Children's Christmas Tree. " He was dressed in a small cape coat. containing about fifteen pockets, and his little dimpled hands were as daintily gloved as a young patriarch's.

ROBERT BEGGIF. He had a face the design for which nature might have copied from one of Raphael's angel choirs; but, entre nous, he is a regular boy's boy, for he declined to accept a doll I offered that had a dislocated hip. He told me he was eight years of age; that he had never gone to school and that he could write, " but not with ink. "

His offering consisted of $2.42, every penny of which he had collected himself. He expressed sincere sympathy for the little children of the poor and promised to buy every one a sled with red runners and bells "when he was a man." The soft black hair that grew in loose rings about his face; the large brown eyes, brimful of merriment and fun; the dimple that played at hide and seek in his pretty, fair face, the delicate coral lips shutting over pearls, and his sturdy little figure filled a pretty yellow satin sachet that his grandmamma had made. "One hundred and thirty-nine" took $8 from his own allowance and a couple of young friends contributed the rest.

To give you an idea of his modesty, this is what the embryonic member of the "Four Hundred " said : 'I don't mind telling you my name and address, but the information is not for publication. I want to do something for the little children and I want to help along the success of The Evenino World's Christmas

I crossed hands with this manly, handsome, brown-eyed boy, and the last words he said were, "Good luck."

Phrebe Samuels, a sweet-faced girl of eleven, with a shock of dark curls that danced about the edge of a scarlet Tam o'Shauter, came from Brooklyn with a little gold barrel full of love coins from the girls of school No. 50.

"Every girl sent her love and good wishes." she said, which pleased me greatly and which I return with interest. Eli and David Schieff, two apple-faced boys of seven and thirteen respectively, came with their father to see how affairs were progressing. Elustruggled with a ten-pound

A SHOR FULL OF COINS, box of candy, the very sight of which made my mouth water. David's gift consisted of two boxes, each a foot square, containing leather-bound blocks with which a forest, a menagerie, a city or the English language can be built. Without trying very hard I captivated Eli's heart and he entertained me with a piece learned for the close of the school term. Gracie Lockwood, a midget of seven summers, walked into the office with a red plush boot, as thick as a cuenmber and twice as long, suspended from her arm by a loop of orange ribbon. Miss Gracic, whose neck and shoulders were veiled with a dozen or more light brown curls, allowed the editor to put his erm about her neck during the entire visit, and showed every evidence of enjoying the sheltering coat-sleeve,

She explained that she hurt her nose the time she fell down her aunt's front steps, bumped her chin coming out of school before the ranks, and knecked her forehead against a gate post trying to reach the latch; "but," she added, with an expression of unmistakable triumph, "I collected every nickel myself, and I guess there are about one hundred and fifty, that's $6,50.

The little girl's arithmetic was allowed to pass unchallenged, and she left the office beaming with delight. Her mamma doesn't know a thing about the wonderful nickel-lined plush book. "She'll awful 'sprized when she reads it in the paper."

Three small boys, who will not allow me to mention even their nick-names, called with Christmas favors in the share of a doll's trunk, a long tubed whistle and a woo'len mitten filled respectively with pennies. nickels and dimes, aggregating about $10. This trio of large-hearted lads was particularly anxious that the children should have something good to eat besides candy and fruit. When told of the difficulty of dining 20,000 hungry children the young men became very thoughtful, and by way of argument offered to "raise $20 before the 20th if The Evening World only would give the poor little things something to eat." A messenger boy brought the following letter:

DEAR NELL NELSON: Last Summer I tried to collect some money from my little friends for your "Baby Fund." Ore very hot day I started out with book and peneil, but had only collected six cents when an iron bench fell on my foot and crushed my toe. I was taken home and confined to my crib for six weeks before I could walk out. I inclose the six cents then collected with this. With the help of two of my playmates I had a little entertainment in our house. We had tableaux such as "lip Van Winkle" in different scenes, "The Ding Child" and many others. You ought to have seen our angels. I wanted to invite you, as you are so kind to little children, but mamma said you would not come would you? I am eleven years old. We all send our love to you, and last night we said God biess dear "Nell Nelson and THE EVENING WORLD." Your loving but unknown little friend,

An hour later my diminutive but unknown friend came in covered with snow and so smothered in wraps and furs that I could scarcely distinguish her from a daughter of Mr. S. Claus. After a deal of untying, unbuttoning and unbooking, a tiny blue-eyed child with almond brown hair and a pretty little face was revealed.

"This shoe," she said, displaying a baby's buttoned boot of gilded kid, "I wore when I was two years old. Mamma didn't want to let me give it away, but I coaxed and she consented. If it hadn't been for the children I'm sure she wouldn't though. The little shoe with its load of silver and copper tied about with a band and rovette of pale blue ribbons was laid on the desk, and the small girl continued: "Last Summer I tried to help along the Sick Babies' Fund. I bought a little pencil and note book and went to see Dr. McDonald. I only had six cents and I counted it about a hundred times before the doctor could see me. While I was playing in his yard a rustic bench fell on my foot and crushed my toes, and I didn't know anything more for two weeks. The doctor carried me home, and my book and pencil and my six pennies too, and I had to stay in my little crib for more than six weeks. As soon as I was well, mamma gave me her parlors for an afternoon, and we had charades and theatricals for all my little friends who paid to come in." After considerable fumbling in her muff and cloak pockets, a long list was hauled out be

earing the foll	owing names:
e Rodrigues, Weil, Tuly, Young, Kuha, Kuha, Kuha, a Wiley, a Machman, neto liodrigora, serue Romane, No Lowenthal, 'Vally, stalig, et Coa, oviller,	Balle Well, Max Well, Max Well, Molle Nelson, Manne Russen, Annie Rogenster Loretta Wiley, Flora Moore, Mary Carter, Edgar Romaine, Arthur Homaine Joe McCarthy, Teedy Lucentla George Nally, Jee Nally, Anna Stack Lawrence Phillit Inst E. J. Harry and the second of the second of the second

The most touching incident of the day was the visit I received from little Mamie Bastisnelli, a girl of twelve, with large black eyes, indescribably sad, because sightless. Her voice was a delight, her face a perfect oval. She had the tints of the clive and rose in her cheeks, and as she talked she caressed the hand of her gentle-faced mother.

"I can't see," she said, "but I feel a great deal, and I was very sorry for the poor children you have written about. Every evening my papa reads THE EVENING WORLD to me, and the other day I had my bank opened and I took out 40 cents to buy a pair of baby stockings and put half of my savings in one of them for the poor children's Christmas tree. I should like to have given all, but I have a para and mamma and a little brother, and they are so very good to me that I thought I must give them something for Christmas.

"Well, I went among my friends with my little brother and collected all this. See!" orening the top of the ribbed stocking. "Five dollars and sixty cents altogether. I call it my silver stocking.
"Here is the mate. You can put them on the tree for some poor child."

I told little Mamie about the doll's stocking Lorette brought me. She was intensely interested and asked a dozen questions about the orphan child. Would she like to have the tiny bit of hosiery with the darn over the toca?

"Ch, so very much." And dear small Leretto, I gave it to her. You'll forgive me, I know, when I tell you how pleased she was. She called you many tender, loving names, pressed Flossy's stocking to her pretty face, and, carefully folding it up, put it in one of her coat pockets and went away with her treasure.

I was not able to do any work, but I never had company in my life that I enjoyed so much as the visits of these children with their tokens of love and words of good-will.

May I waive the formalities that hedge in good society and invite you to call on me next Saturday? I can't pronice you any refreshments, not even a cracker, and I may not be able to visit with you more than a minute. But, my dears, of this much you may be certain-a sincere welcome-and I'll give you the right hand of fellowship in token of undying affection.

Do come and see me, and let me tell you how very unhappy these waifs of poverty are, and how much good your penny boots, nickel mitten and silver stocking will do.

I am in the office from 0 until noon, and I hope to see you. If you can't come send in your Christmas offering, and if that is not convenient send your address to the office and our Mercury will call on you. But be kind and be quick and do let us bear from NELL NELSON.

Driver Emerich Fractures a Little Boy's Skull with a Stone.

Eight-year-old Robert T. Paine, of 656 Madison street, Brooklyn, is hovering between life and death to-day, without hope of recovery, with a fractured skull caused by a stone thrown by Henry Emerich, twenty-three years old, living at 500 Monroe street, Brooklyn, and the latter is in the Raymond Street Jail.

Emerich was employed in driving the cart of Butcher John Kopke, whose shop is at the corner of Monroe street and Stuyvesant

Yester'ar afternoon he was delivering meat to his customers, and while passing the corner of Reid avenue and Monroe street a crowd of small boys, including Robbie Paine, began snowballing him, hitting him and the horse he was driving several times. Emerich became so angry that be got off the cart, and picking up a cobble stone threw it with great force into the crowd of

The other hove stamuseded, but returned to their wounde! and unconscious companion when they saw Emerich remount his cart and drive off.

One of the lade ran post haste to Dr. Corbin's office, at 1943 Gates avenue, and the doctor was soon at the little fellow's side and endravored to revive him.

He had the boy removed to his parents' home at 656 Madison street, where a closer examination of the wound was made.

The skull was found to be fractured so badly that Dr. Corbin could not give the nearly distracted parents any hope of the recovery of the little sufferer.

The police of the Fourteenth Precinct were notified at once of the occurrence, and Sergt, Barr found Emerich at midnight, arrested him and locked him up to await examination.

The prisoner was arraigned this morning before Justice Kenna, and on the statements of the Corbin, who said that the boy was in as

RACE TRACK ODDS.

"The Evening World's" Figures Verified by Morning Paper Reports. The attention of The Evening World has been called to the difference in figures representing the odds given by the bookmakers at the Winter race-tracks published in Tuz EVENING WORLD Sporting Extra as compared with those printed in the other sporting extras.

Investigation proves that there is a differcace, and at times a very big one. Com-parison with the reports in the morning papers, however, shows that THE EVENING WOELD is correct, as the following table demonstrates:

SURELY LA GRIPPE.

All Symptoms of Russian Influenza in the Reported Cases.

It Is Infectious, but Not a Deadly Disease.

Isolation Not Deemed Necessary by Health Board Officials.

There is to-day no doubt that the dreaded Russian influenza is in New York air. Few can escape it by taking thought. It is no respecter of persons, rank, age, sex or previous condition. It is not deadly, not even necessarily dangerous, but it will afford a grand opportunity for dealers to work of their surplus of bandanas.

Authorities all auree that it is infectious, The rapid spread of La Grippe from its first appearance in the household of the Czarof Russia three weeks ago through all the En-rorean capitals and its jump across the Atlastic are too well authenticated to admit of a doubt.

Dr. Cyrus Edson, Chief Inspector of Contagious Diseaves, said this morning to an EVENING WOLLD reporter, that here was little doubt that La Grippe was infectious. It is not like small pox, diphtheria or yellow fever, necessarily a dangerous disease, how-fever, necessarily a dangerous disease, however. It arises from atmospheric conditions over which the Board of Health can have no control. It is of the nature of what has been known as an "car'h cold," and he believes that the constant opening of the earth in digging up the streets, &c., is to a great extent the cause.

No stringent measures can be taken by the Board of Health, they can only see that the best sanitury conditions possible are maintained. The duration of the disease is from three to seven days.

Dr. Edison repeated that he did not deem the disease to be dangerous, but decidetly unpleavant. Precautions against taking cold should be regordled.

Dr. Raymon Guiteras, of the Board of Health sanott the this cause of the the charge of the Board of used.

Dr. Raymon Guiferas, of the Board of Heaith, reports that there are seven persons sick with La Grippe at 133 East Forty-sixt atrect. There are thirteen persons in the family, their ages ranging from fifty down to four years. He described the symptoms as a chil at first, followed by fainting, prostration, sore throat, the usual masal indications of a cold, succeeded in some cases by broughits and lung trouble. The patents' temperature was at 100 to 105 descrees.

by bronchits and long trouble. The patents' temperature was at 100 to 105 da grees.

Dr. Guiteras was unwilling to go on record as pronouncing the disease certainly to be Russian influenza, but the symptoms were all in line with the published accounts of that disease.

'Do you think it will gain a foothold in New York?' he was asked.

'The indications are that it will. It has spread rapidly in other cities."

Dr. Guiteras coincides with Dr. Edson's view that the disease is not dangerous if properly attended to. He deems it infestions, but not sufficiently serious to necessitate isolation of patients.

Albert Klamroth, of 133 East Forty-six street, is entitled to distinction of first esterating La Grippe in his family. Mr. Klamroth is an advortaing agent, and seven members of his householders suffering from the ravages of the dreaded influenza.

Miss Klamroth was the first of the family to be taken by La Grippe. She called receiving a family on a family just returned from Estone, and a few days later. Thursday late she began to experience the symptoms of the influenza.

There were pains in her head; she was troubled with discusses, then chills as centiy on a family just returned from Escope, and a few days later. Thursday last she began to experience the symptoms of the influenza.

There were pains in her head; she was troubled with dizziness, then chills and nansea for a day, followed by pains in the limbs, an oppressive iceling in the ched and a sense of weariness. Then a high fever set in, the patient sneezed as sneezed till her nose was red and sore. This was followed by severe attacks of coughina.

Miss Klamroth's symptoms were specific repeated in the cases of her mother as little brother. Saturday Mr. Klamroth younger daughter, his son-in-law and the cook began to sneeze. Sunday his grandchild became ill, and Mr. Klamroth, E. came down on Monday.

At the Health Department the affection is called flussian influenza. It has prevailed extensively in the large cities of Russia, Germany, Austria and France, and is highest classes of society have suffered fully as much therefrom as their less considerable neighbors.

There have been other visitations from influenza, and as an argument in favore the theory that it is contagious and travels with man rather than on the winds it may be noted that it took three years for influenza to go around the globe in the day when fifty miles a day was the limit far human travel.

The disease started in China in 1830 and reached America by way of Europe two years after, while now an ocean grayhous seems to have brought it over to us within three weeks of its first appearance in 81. Petersburg.

It may comfort the sufferer to know that in 1790 George Washington, President, seezed and was miserable in the same way for two weeks.

Dr. Carl II, Lellman reported the Fortistik street cases, and Dr. Raymon Guiegas, a sanitary physician, was detailed by the Health Department to make a thorous investigation and report.

Health Commissioner Bryant apprehend no serious results from the influenza, theat all the authorities agree that though is would never cause the death of an otherwishealthy person, it might hasten the demis of a
